Central solar fotovoltaica montenegrina de 50 MW

Montenegro es un pequeño país situado en el sureste de Europa con una población de poco más de 600.000 habitantes. A pesar de su tamaño, el país se está convirtiendo rápidamente en líder de la producción de energías renovables, sobre todo en el ámbito de la tecnología fotovoltaica (FV).

La abundante luz solar y el terreno montañoso de Montenegro lo convierten en un lugar ideal para la producción de energía solar. El país recibe una media de 2.500 horas de luz solar al año, lo que lo convierte en uno de los lugares más soleados de Europa. Esto ha permitido a Montenegro aprovechar la energía del sol mediante la instalación de paneles fotovoltaicos en todo el país.

Uno de los mayores proyectos fotovoltaicos de Montenegro es el parque solar de Briska Gora, situado cerca de la ciudad de Ulcinj. Se espera que esta instalación de 250 MW produzca más de 400 GWh de electricidad al año, suficiente para abastecer a 100.000 hogares. El proyecto es un esfuerzo conjunto del gobierno de Montenegro y de inversores privados, que ven el potencial de la energía solar para reducir la dependencia del país de los combustibles fósiles y crear un futuro energético más sostenible.

Además de proyectos a gran escala como Briska Gora, Montenegro también está fomentando el uso de la tecnología fotovoltaica a menor escala. El país ofrece incentivos para que los propietarios de viviendas y las empresas instalen paneles solares en sus propiedades, incluidas desgravaciones fiscales y subvenciones para el coste de los equipos. Esto ha provocado un crecimiento del número de instalaciones solares en tejados en todo Montenegro, aumentando aún más la capacidad de energía solar del país.

El compromiso de Montenegro con las energías renovables va más allá de la energía solar. El país se ha fijado el objetivo de generar el 33% de su electricidad a partir de fuentes renovables para 2020, con planes para aumentarlo al 36,5% para 2030. Esto incluye no sólo la energía solar, sino también la eólica, la hidroeléctrica y la biomasa.

Puntos clave

Se está estudiando un proyecto de construcción de una central solar de red (SPP) en Montenegro para la venta de electricidad a una red centralizada sin almacenamiento intermedio. Está previsto que la ejecución del Proyecto estimule el desarrollo de la energía solar en Montenegro y la transición a fuentes de energía verde renovable sin hidrocarburos.

El escenario principal para la ejecución del Proyecto es con el uso de paneles solares de fabricación china, con subvenciones de EKO FOND MONTENEGRO, con una tarifa estándar (unos 110 $ por MWh).
